Allison Ng defends high-profile product liability, pharmaceutical, and medical device cases throughout the country in state and federal courts. She has experience litigating lawsuits from single-plaintiff claims to consolidated or coordinated proceedings, concurrent federal and state litigation, multidistrict litigation, class actions, multi-county litigation, and mass-tort litigation.

Allison understands the evolving regulatory framework and business issues impacting pharmaceutical and medical devices companies. She collaborates with her team to determine the best course of action for a matter, while balancing the client's reputation, litigation cost, and potential impact.

Allison strives to make a meaningful impact in her profession and personal life. In her free time, she serves on various bar and community organizations to help increase diversity and to establish a pipeline of diverse candidates for involvement in the legal and local community.
